EDITOR'S NOTE

Dear Friends,

It has been an exciting start to the 2015 IAU racing season. 24 Hour World Championships (Turin, Italy) and the Trail World Championships (Annecy, France) are in the books.

We are accepting bids for the World & Continental Championships. Please let us know if you would like to bid.

I will also take this opportunity to extend our condolences to the family of Christophe Rochotte who passed away covering the French championships. His friendly smile and unbiased journalism will be missed.

We, at your Executive Council, are at your service. So please do not hesitate to contact us.

Yours in Sport,

FREQUENCY OF IAU WORLD CHAMPIONSHIPS

The 100km and 24 Hours world champs are on an alternating year schedule (with continental champs in between). 50km and Trail world champs are to be held annually.

The alternating of 100km and 24 Hour events will allow the federations to focus on fewer events but also for venues to submit solid bids for hosting championships.

Continental championships will alternate in between the world championships.

ULTRARUNNING'S BIGGEST STRENGTH: CAMARADERIE AMONGST ITS

Ultrarunning is bigger than an individual athlete. It is, in the truest sense of the word, larger than the sum of its parts. The athletes who partake in the races are competitors, individuals with a sheer will power to achieve their goal, while running towards their personal achievements culminating years of hard work and training.

But the athletes who partake in these races are also members of a wider community of runners, people with a compassion for their fellow runner with a firm recognition of their efforts on the race course coupled with respect for the achievements being strived for on any given day.

This feeling of camaraderie transcends boundaries, extends beyond languages and surpasses varied cultures. The universality of ultrarunning is the basis of this companionship between runners who are competitors on the race course and friends Off of it.
